MIXED CORN AND WHEATEN FLOUR.

Combination Produces a Cheap And Wholesome Bread, Very Popular in Europe.

MURPHY BREAD PROPAGANDA.

How Extensive Use of Corn Flour in Europe Increased Exportation, More Than Doubled Price of Corn.

There is no question more important or more pressing for a nation than that of the cheapness and extent of its bread supply. Yet it is a strange fact that the people of the United States have availed themselves but little of a grain as human food that has always been found wholesome, cheap and nutritous, the most prolific cereal of the new world and the only food of the sturdy pioneers who founded our coun-

The adaptability of Indian corn The adaptability of Indian corn as a food has not begun to be appreciated even in the United States. The preparation of corn may be infinitely more varied than that of wheat. Americans have never taken a proper pride in this great native cereal, Indian corn.

The ruddy face and stout body of the child of fifty years ago, followed by the strength and constitution of by the strength and constitution of the man and woman, was little less than a tribute to the excellence of mush and milk for the child, hog and hominy for the adult. But with the removal of the andirons and the crane the ash cake, Johnny cake, hominy and pudding are little more than tradition with people of the present day. In order that the bakers will not be obliged to increase the price of bread on account of the present high price of wheat flour, which they threaten to do, would strongly recommend the use of 25 precent of corn flour, which costs one-half the price of wheat flour, which will produce a more wholesome and digestible loaf than bread made from all flour.

There will be no difference in the There will be no difference in the taste or appearance of the loaf, and equally as palatable as that from all wheat flour, and the bread will keep fresh longer. Fifty per cent. of corn flour can be used in the making of an kinds of cakes and pastry. During the time of the last great rye failure in Germany, in 1891, I was sent by the United. States department of United States department of agriculture to that country to show them the value of our corn flour as human food, and induced the government authorities, after a great deal of difficulty and persuasive efforts, to make tests of this mixture in the government bakeries. The matter was placed in the hands of the Berlin imperial board of health;

after many months of patient testing they found that a good bread could be made of the above mixture. The first loaves were sent to the emperor, who was well pleased with it, and who took a great interest in the mat-ter. An official report was drawn up which was most favorable as to the value of products of corn as human food, signed by the board of health and published in the official blue book Over 800 bakeries in Berlin were selling the bread, and out of compliment to the writer called it after his name. By tals mixture they were able to sell a five pound loaf for 15 cents, whereas they could only sell a three pound loaf for the same price made of all rye loaf for the same price made a large saving flour; you can see what a large saving flour; The there is by using the mixture. The bakers in Belgium are using corn flour to a large extent, according to U. S. Consul Winslow, of Liege. A late official report to the state department, states that there are eleven large corn mills in that country exclusively grinding American corn. There were en I commenced the propaganda. He mentions one large corporation bakery who are baking 10,000 loaves of this mixed bread weekly, and that the consumption of American corn in that country is over a half bushel annually per capita,

I think, than is used in the United States. I account for this from the fact that it was in Belgium, in 1888, that I first commenced the corn propaganda. Our exports for that year were only 24,000. 000 bushels; in 1900 it was over 213,-000,000, and every acre in the corn belt was doubled in value since then, and the price of corn has gone up from less than twenty cents in that year to ever fifty cents a bushel now.

The Murphy bread, now so popular in Hanover, is 1/2 corn and 2/4 rye flour. It tastes very well and cannot be distinguished from all rye bread neither in taste or appearance, and is a good deal cheaper than other bread, and gives good satisfaction, and at first the bakers had some difficulty to supplying it, the demand was so large. The bakers sell this Murphy bre at 50 pfennigs for a five-pound loaf, they formerly said a three-pound loaf of all rye at 60 pfennigs, which is quite a saving to the people. The maize (corn) bread introduced by the writer has now become an article of current sale in Germany under the name of "Murphy bread." A sipally in the populaus quarter in the cities sell almost exclusively this new bread. Large red signs placed in the windows announce "Murphy brod" at 60 pfennings the loaf of five pounds which makes a saving of about twenty per cent on the price of rye which costs on an average in Berlin 75 pfen-nigs for five pounds. Those bakeries have a considerable trade. At some of them their customers have to form in them their customers have to form in line, the crowd is so great.

It may be interesting to know that one of Hanover's cake bakers has met with good luck in using 75 per cent of corn flour and 25 per cent of American wheat flour for his sweet cakes, and on account of the sugar and flavoring he usually employees he first to test usually employes he finds no taste the corn and the customers have up to this time made no discovery of any difference. This adds greatly to als profits and as good a cake is fur-alshed and can be sold at so much less wrote and published a book, for gratuitous circulation, in Edinburg, of 96 pages, on the mode of preparing Indian corn for the table, It contains 130 different formulas; the most im-portant one is the method of mixing and preparing the corn and wheat flour for bread, as it requires a certain way mixing in order to have the breadlight as that made from wheat flour This book can be had on application to the undersigned.
